

UDIA Victoria – Who We Are and What We Do

The Urban Development Institute of Australia (UDIA) is the peak industry body for the urban development sector. In Victoria alone, we represent the collective views of over 320 member companies including developers, consultants, financial institutions, suppliers, government authorities and utilities. Together we drive industry discussion and debate, which serves to assist key regulators and all levels of government in achieving successful planning, infrastructure, affordability and environmental outcomes.

PLANNING

Purpose

To advocate for the reform and improvement of Victoria's planning system. Victoria's planning system must facilitate development that meets Victoria's housing, community and urban development needs and have a positive economic, social and environmental impact.

Examples of priority advocacy issues

- Review the Residential Zones and their impact on developable land
- Improve the Planning Scheme Amendment process
- Review and improve environmental management rules and regulations (Melbourne Strategic Assessment, Native Vegetation Clearing Regulations, Bushfire Regulations and BAL)
- Central City and precinct-wide planning controls
- Building regulations
- Review of the Planning & Environment Act

- Defining 'Affordable Housing' for the purposes of legislation and implementation

GREENFIELDS DEVELOPMENT

Purpose

To advocate for the timely provision of new housing and communities in greenfield suburbs, as well as infrastructure and services to meet the needs of new communities, without adversely impacting the affordability and accessibility of land prices and housing.

Examples of priority advocacy issues

- PSP process, land supply and lot prices
- Post-PSP lot production challenges
- Implementation of the Infrastructure Contribution Plan system
- Funding models for enabling infrastructure such as roads, schools and public transport
- Industry representation in ongoing discussions with service providers including water corporations, power companies, local government and road authorities
- Reform of the Engineering Plan Approval Process and timely delivery of infrastructure to new communities
- Ongoing reform of the Growth Area Infrastructure Contribution system
- Quantify the cost of greenfield development

URBAN RENEWAL AND INFILL DEVELOPMENT

Purpose

To advocate for the timely provision of housing, infrastructure and services that meet the needs of established and growing communities, without adversely impacting the affordability and accessibility of housing, and advocating for innovative and responsible re-development of Melbourne's urban renewal precincts.

Examples of priority advocacy issues

- Urban renewal pipeline
- Capacity of Melbourne's inner suburbs to accommodate development
- Major city-building infrastructure projects that contribute to urban development including Melbourne Metro, Fishermans Bend and the West Melbourne urban renewal precinct.
- Industry representation in ongoing discussions with service providers including water corporations, power companies, local government and road authorities
- Urban design standards and apartment design standards

INNOVATION, SUSTAINABILITY AND TECHNOLOGY

Purpose

To advocate for awareness and adoption of new technologies and innovations that will advance the urban development industry's knowledge and nous. To encourage and support sustainable urban development that generates positive economic, social and environmental outcomes.

Examples of priority advocacy issues

- Provide industry insight to the UDIA and its membership on emerging trends and focus areas within the technology sector;
- Directly advocate for the social, economic and environmental benefits of sustainable urban development to government so that the industry is supported by policy and regulation;
- Represent the industry to government on matters of Environmental and Sustainable Design policy, changes to regulations and other relevant policy matters;
- Promote affordability through the use and integration of alternate technologies including cost effective energy products; and
- Promote the benefits of urban ecology through focus on the effects of street trees in new subdivisions, urban forests in public open spaces and integrated natural drainage systems within urban environments.

FINANCE AND INVESTMENT

Purpose

To advocate for changes and improvements to the current tax and financial regulatory environment that encourages the delivery of urban development and the supply of new housing through a more efficient and equitable system. Promote better access to finance from various funding streams and support the UDIA's engagement with the financial sector, and protect Victoria as an investment destination.

Examples of priority advocacy issues

- Make a case to reform existing direct development taxes such as the Non-Resident and Absentee Surcharges as well as Stamp Duty and Land Tax;
- Victorian Government's Consumer Property Legislation Reform Agenda including the review of the Sale of Land Act, the Estate Agents Act, the Owners Corporation Act and the Conveyancers Act;
- Drive increased industry engagement with the finance sector, address issues involving the availability of finance and the impact on project feasibility of changing regulation and policy;
- Protecting Victoria's reputation as an investment destination; and
- Privatisation of Land Victoria by the Victorian Government.

REGIONAL COMMITTEES

- Bendigo Chapter (Northern Region)
- Geelong Chapter (Barwon Region)

ROLES AND RESPONSIBILITIES

Both Regional Chapters have the same roles and responsibilities. However, activities are geographically focussed.

- Provide an overall vision for the development of the region to help inform government strategy and policy;
- As an extension to the UDIA, undertake activities that influence policy and encourages membership at a local level;
- Connect with local decision makers to influence the growth and development of the regional area;
- Participate in workshops, committees, taskforces which assist government in the development and growth of the region;
- Represent the UDIA on Panel Hearings that are critical to the growth and development of the region; and
- Assist UDIA Victoria to deliver one Industry Lunch and one Industry Forum per annum in the region. Additional events will be assessed on a merits basis and will be subject to the resourcing capacity of the UDIA at the discretion of the CEO and General Manager.

Examples of priority advocacy issues

- Respond to Government plans like Plan Greater Bendigo and Plan Greater Geelong
- Ensuring effective and positive working relationships with regional service providers including water corporations, power companies, local government and road authorities
- Promote and advocate initiatives like the Central Geelong Revitalisation and
- Provide a clear land use planning and development framework for each of the major activity centres in the region, recognising the need to encourage a diverse range of roles and to identify key development opportunities.
